

Chemical physics of polymer solutions

Exercise 6

29 December 2003

1. Using scaling arguments, calculate the free energy of a real chain, containing N monomers of length a , which is compressed into a tube of diameter $A > a$. Assume an arbitrary scaling exponent ν .
2. The same as 1, but now the chain is compressed into a slit of width A between two plates.